A brief note about the Chaldeans.

These “mysterious” Akkadians or Chaldeans, whose name both upon classical and biblical authority designates not only a nation but that peculiar priestly caste initiated in and entirely devoted to the Sciences of astrology and magic. Held sacred in all ages, this peculiar learning was concentrated in Babylon and known in the remotest periods of history as a system of religious worship and Science which made the glory of the Chaldean.1

[The Chaldeans] assuredly got their primitive learning from the Brahmans, for H.C. Rawlinson shows an undeniably Vedic influence in the early mythology of Babylon; and Col. Vans Kennedy has long since justly declared that Babylonia was, from her origin, the seat of Sanskrit and Brahman learning.2 . . . [H]Ea, the God of Wisdom, [is] now identified with the Ōannēs of Berosus, the half-man, half-fish, who taught the Babylonians culture and the art of writing.3

It is maintained that INDIA (not in its present limits, but including its ancient boundaries) is the only country in the world which still has among her sons adepts, who have the knowledge of all the seven sub-systems and the key to the entire system. Since the fall of Memphis, Egypt began to lose those keys one by one, and Chaldea had preserved only three in the days of Berosus. As for the Hebrews, in all their writings they show no more than a thorough knowledge of the astronomical, geometrical and numerical systems of symbolizing all the human, and especially the physiological functions. They never had the higher keys.4

God, Father, Mind, Fire Monad, Duad, Triad.¹

1² But God is he that has the head of a hawk. He is the first, indestructible, eternal, unbegotten, indivisible, dissimilar; the dispenser of all good; incorruptible; the best of the good, the wisest of the wise: he is the father of equity and justice, self-taught, physical, and perfect, and wise, and the only inventor of the sacred philosophy.³

2⁴ Theurgists assert that he⁵ is a God, and celebrate him as both older and younger,⁶ as a circulating and eternal God, as understanding the whole number of all things moved in the world, and moreover infinite through his power and of a spiral form.⁷

3 The mundane god, eternal, boundless,
Young and old, of a spiral form.

¹ [Mr. Taylor in his collection of the oracles (Class. Journ. No. 22) has arranged them under the following heads.
I. The oracles which he conjectures may be ascribed to Zoroaster himself. This division includes the collection of Psellus, and in this collection are marked Z. as in the 8th.
II. Oracles delivered by Theurgists under the reign of Marcus Antoninus. These relate to the Intelligible and Intellectual orders: and are here distinguished by a T. as in the 4th.
III. Oracles delivered either by the Theurgists or by Zoroaster, here marked Z. or T. as in the 2nd. The rest he has placed together as uncertain or imperfect in their meaning; to which he has subjoined a few from the Treatise of Lydus de Mensibus. We are also indebted to Mr. Taylor for the references to the authors from whom the collection was originally made, and for the addition of several oracles hitherto unnoticed: the latter are distinguished by the letters Tay. after the reference, as in the 2nd oracle.]

² [Eusebius attributes this to the Persian Zoroaster. I have added it to the collection.]

³ Euseb. Preep. Evan. lib. I. c. 10

⁴ [Lobeck seems to be of opinion that neither this nor the one next following have any claim to be inserted.]

⁵ [Χρόνος, Time — Tay. — Qy. Κρόνος. The latter Platonists continually substitute Χρόνος for Κρόνος.]

⁶ [Cf. Says Dunlap (Vestiges of Spirit-History of Man, 1858, pp. 189-90): “The Egyptians distinguish between an older and younger Horus; the former the brother of Osiris, the latter the son of Osiris and Isis.” The first is the Idea of the world remaining in the Demiurgic Mind, “born in darkness before the creation of the world.” The second Horus is this “Idea” going forth from the Logos, becoming clothed with matter, and assuming an actual existence.

⁷ Z. or T. | Proc. in Tim. 244. — Tay.
For Eternity, according to the oracle, is the cause of never-failing life, of unwearied power, and unsluggish energy.

Hence this stable God is called by the gods silent, and is said to consent with mind, and to be known by souls through mind alone.

The Chaldeans call the God (Dionysus or Bacchus) Iaō in the Phœnician tongue (instead of the intelligible light), and he is often called Sabaooth, signifying that he is above the seven poles, that is the Demiurgus.

Containing all things in the one summit of his own hyparxis, he himself subsists wholly beyond.

Measuring and bounding all things.

For nothing imperfect circulates from a paternal principle.

The father hurled not forth fear but infused persuasion.

. . . The Father has hastily withdrawn himself; But has not shut up his own fire in his intellectual power.

Such is the Mind which is there energizing before energy. That it has not gone forth but abode in the paternal depth, And in the adytum according to divinely-nourished silence.

All things are the progeny of one fire. The Father perfected all things, and delivered them over To the second Mind, whom all nations of men call the first.

And of the Mind which conducts the empyrean world.
What the Mind says, it says by understanding.
Power is with them, but Mind is from him.
The Mind of the Father riding on attenuated rulers
Which glitter with the furrows of inflexible and implacable Fire.

. . . After the paternal conception
I the Soul reside, a heat animating all things.
. . . For he placed
Mind in Soul and Soul in dull Body,
The Father of Gods and Men so placed them in ours.

Natural works coexist with the intellectual light
Of the Father. For it is the Soul, which adorned the great heaven
And which adorns it after the Father.
But her horns are established on high.

The Soul, being a bright fire, by the power of the father,
Remains immortal, and is mistress of life,
And fills up many of the recesses of the world.

The channels being intermixed, she performs the works of incorruptible fire.

For the Fire which is first beyond did not shut up his power
In matter by works but by mind:
For the framer of the fiery world is the Mind of Mind.

Who first sprung from Mind
Clothing fire with fire, binding them together that he might mingle
The fountainous craters, while he preserved the flower of his own fire.

Thence a fiery whirlwind drawing the flower of glowing fire,
Flashing into the cavities of the worlds; for all things from thence Begin to extend downwards their admirable rays.

The Monad is there first where the paternal Monad subsists.
26 The Monad is extended which generates two.
27 For the Duad sits by this, and glitters with intellectual sections,
To govern all things, and to order each.
28 The Mind of the Father said that all things should be cut into three:
His will assented, and immediately all things were cut.
29 The Mind of the eternal Father said into three,
Governing all things by Mind.
30 The Father mingled every Spirit from this Triad.
31 All things are governed in the bosoms of this triad.
32 All things are governed and subsist in these three.
33 For you may conceive that all things serve these three principles.
34 From these flows the body of the Triad, being pre-existent,
Not the first, but that by which things are measured.
35 And there appeared in it virtue, and wisdom,
And multisicient truth.
36 For in the whole world shineth a Triad, over which a Monad rules.
37 The first is the sacred course . . . , but in the middle
Air, the third the other which cherisheth the earth in fire.
38 Abundantly animating light, fire, ether, worlds.
Intelligibles, Intellectuals, Iynges, Synoches, Tele-tarchæ, Fountains, Principles, Hecate, and Dæmons.

The Mind of the Father made a jarring noise, understanding by unwearied counsel
Omniform ideas: which flying out from one fountain
They sprung forth: for from the Father was the will and the end;
(By which they are connected with the Father
According to alternate life from several vehicles),
But they were divided, being by intellectual fire distributed
Into other Intellectuals: For the king previously placed before the multiform world
An intellectual, incorruptible pattern, the print of whose form
Is promoted through the world, according to which things the world appeared Beautified with all-various Ideas; of which there is one fountain,
From this the others rush forth distributed,
And separated about the bodies of the world, and are borne
Through its vast recesses like swarms
Turning themselves on all sides in every direction,
They are Intellectual conceptions from the paternal fountain,
Partaking abundantly the flower of Fire in the point of restless time,
But the primary self-perfect fountain of the Father
Poured forth these primogenial ideas.

These being many ascend flashingly into the shining worlds
And in them are contained three summits.

[The whole of the following division is a system grafted upon the Platonic doctrine of Ideas. It is composed of six different orders, called Triads, or each consisting of three Triads, which have different names in the respective theologies of the Modern Platonists, and of those who assumed the title of Chaldaeans. Both regarded the first Cause as the One and the Good; from whom proceeded in succession the three first orders which were all Ineffable and Superessential.]

[CF. “For the ‘Fathers’ — such as Origen or Clemens Alexandrinus — the Moon was Jehovah’s living symbol: the giver of Life and the giver of Death, the disposer of being — in our World. For, if Artemis was Luna in Heaven, and, with the Greeks, Diana on Earth, who presided over child-birth and life: with the Egyptians, she was Heqet (Hecate) in Hell, the goddess of Death, who ruled over magic and enchantments. More than this: as the personified moon, whose phenomena are triadic, Diana-Hecatē-Luna is the three in one. For she is Diva triforis, tergmina, triceps — three heads on one neck [the goddess Τριμορφος in the statuary of Alcamenes], like Brahmā-Vishnu-Śiva. Hence she is the prototype of our Trinity, which has not always been entirely male.” Secret Doctrine, I p. 387. — ED. PHIL.]

They are the guardians of the works of the Father
And of the one Mind, the Intelligible.¹

All things subsist together in the Intelligible world.³

But all Intellect understands the deity, for Intellect is not without the Intelligible,
And the Intelligible does not subsist apart from Intellect.⁴

For Intellect is not without the Intelligible: it does not subsist apart from it.⁵
By Intellect he contains the Intelligibles, but introduces the Soul into the worlds.
By Intellect he contains the Intelligibles, but introduces Sense into the worlds.⁶
For the paternal Intellect, which understands Intelligibles,
And adorns things ineffable, has sowed symbols through the world.⁷
This order is the beginning of all section.⁸
The Intelligible is the principle of all section.⁹
The Intelligible is food to that which understands.¹⁰,¹¹
The oracles concerning the orders exhibits it prior to Heaven as ineffable, and add — It has mystic silence.¹²
The oracle calls the Intelligible causes Swift, and asserts that proceeding from the Father, they run to him.¹³
Those natures are both Intellectual and Intelligible, which, themselves possessing intellection, are the objects of intelligence to others.¹⁵

Because it fills the life-producing bosom of Hecate.
And it instils into the Synoches the enlivening strength of Fire
Endued with mighty power.\(^2\)

Mingling the proper force of his own strength in the Synoches.\(^3\)

From him leap forth all implacable thunders,
And the whirlwind receiving bosoms of the all-splendid strength
Of the Father-begotten Hecate; and he who begirds the flower of fire
And the strong spirit of the poles, all fiery beyond.

Another fontal, which leads the empyreal world.

The fountain of fountains, and the boundary of all fountains.

Under two minds the life-generating fountain of souls is comprehended.

Beneath them lies the principal of the immaterials.

Father-begotten light, for he alone having gathered from the strength of the Father
The flower of mind has the power of understanding, the paternal mind;
To instil into all fountains and principles the power
Of understanding, and of always remaining in a ceaseless revolution.

All fountains and principles whirl round,
And always remain in a ceaseless revolution.

The Principles, which have understood the Intelligible works of the Father
He has clothed in sensible works and bodies,
Being the intermediate links standing to communicate between the Father and Matter,
Rendering apparent the images of unapparent natures,
And inscribing the unapparent in the apparent frame of the world.
Typhon, Echidna, and Python, being the progeny of Tartarus and Earth, which is conjoined with Heaven, form as it were a certain Chaldaic triad, which is the inspector of the whole disordered fabrication.

Irrational dæmons derive their subsistence from the aërial rulers, wherefore the oracle says, Being the charioteer of the aërial, terrestrial, and aquatic dogs.

The aquatic, when applied to divine natures, signifies a government inseparable from water, and hence the oracle calls the aquatic gods water walkers.

There are certain aquatic dæmons whom Orpheus called Nereides in the more elevated exhalations of water such as appear in this cloudy air, whose bodies are sometimes seen, as Zoroaster thinks, by more acute eyes, especially in Persia and Africa.

Soul, Life, Man.

78 These things the Father conceived, and the mortal was animated for him.¹

79 For the Father of gods and men placed the mind in soul,
But in body he placed you.

80 The paternal mind has sowed symbols in the souls.²

81 Having mingled the vital spark from two according substances,
Mind and Divine Spirit, as a third to these he added
Holy Love, the venerable charioteer uniting all things.³

82 Filling the soul with profound love.⁴

83 The Soul of men will in a manner clasp God to herself.
Having nothing mortal she is wholly inebriated from God,
For she glories in the harmony under which the mortal body exists.⁵

84 The more powerful souls perceive truth through themselves, and are of a more inventive nature. “Such souls are saved through their own strength,” according to the oracle.⁶

85 The oracle says, ascending souls sing a pæan.⁷

86 Of all souls those certainly are superlatively blessed
Which are poured forth from heaven to earth;
And they are happy, and have ineffable stamina,
As many as proceed from thy splendid self, Oh king,
Or from Jove himself, under the strong necessity of Mithus.⁸

87 The souls of those who quit the body violently are most pure.⁹

88 The ungirders of the soul, which give her breathing, are easy to be loosed.¹⁰

89 For tho’ you see this soul manumitted
   The Father sends another, that the number may be complete.1

90 . . . Understanding the works of the Father
   They avoid the shameless wing of fate;
   They are placed in God, drawing strong torches,
   Descending from the Father, from which, as they descend, the soul
   Gathers of the empyreal fruits the soul-nourishing flower.2

91 This animastic spirit, which blessed men have called the pneumatic soul, becomes a god, an all-various daemon, and an image, and the soul in this suffers her punishments. The oracles, too, accord with this account: for they assimilate the employment of the soul in Hades to the delusive visions of a dream.3

92 One life with another, from the distributed channels.
   Passing from above through the opposite part
   Through the centre of the earth; and the fifth the middle,
   Another fiery channel, where the life-beaming fire descends
   As far as the material channels.4

93 Moisture is a symbol of life; hence Plato, and the gods before Plato, call it
   (the soul); at one time the liquid of the whole of vivification, and at another time a certain fountain of it.5

94 Oh man, of a daring nature, thou subtile production.6

95 For thy vessel the beasts of the earth shall inhabit.7

96 Since the soul perpetually runs and passes through all things in a certain space of time, which being performed, it is presently compelled to run back again through all things and unfold the same web of generation in the world, according to Zoroaster, who thinks that as often as the same causes return, the same effects will in like manner be returned.8

97 According to Zoroaster, in us the ethereal vestment of the soul perpetually revolves.9

The oracles delivered by the gods celebrate the essential fountain of every soul, the empyrean, the ethereal, and the material. This fountain they separate from the whole vivific goddess;¹ from whom also suspending the whole of fate, they make two series, the one animastic, or belonging to the soul, and the other belonging to Fate. They assert that the soul is derived from the animastic series, but that sometimes it becomes subservient to Fate, when passing into an irrational condition of being, it becomes subject to fate instead of Providence.²

Matter, the Word, and Nature.

99 The matrix containing all things.

100 Wholly division, and indivisible.

101 Thence abundantly springs forth the generation of multifarious matter.

102 These frame indivisibles and sensibles,
And corporiforms and things destined to matter.

103 The fontal nymphs, and all the aquatic spirits,
And the terrestrial, aerial, and glittering recesses,
Are the lunar riders and rulers of all matter,
Of the celestial, the starry, and that which lies in the abysses.

104 Evil, according to the oracle, is more frail than nonentity.

105 We learn that matter pervades the whole world, as the gods also assert.

106 All divine natures are incorporeal,
But bodies are bound in them for your sakes.
Bodies not being able to contain incorporeals
By reason of the corporeal nature, in which you are concentrated.

107 For the paternal self-begotten mind understanding his works
Sowed in all the fiery bond of love,
That all things might continue loving for an infinite time.
That the connected series of things might intellectually remain in all the light of the Father,
That the elements of the world might continue their course in love.

He constituted a septenary of erratic animals.

Suspending their disorder in well-disposed zones.

He made them six in number, and for the seventh
He cast into the midst the fire of the sun.

And that the swift sun may come as usual about the centre.

Eagerly urging itself towards the centre of resounding light.

And the great sun and the bright moon.

And of the solar circles, and of the lunar clashings,
And of the aerial recesses,
The melody of the ether, and of the sun,
and of the passages of the moon, and of the air.

The most mystic of discourses inform us, that the wholeness of him (the sun) is in the supermundane orders: for there a solar world and a total light subsist, as the oracles of the Chaldæans affirm.

The more true sun measures all things by time, being truly a time of time, according to the oracle of the gods concerning it.

The disk (of the sun) is carried in the starless much above the inerratic sphere: and hence he is not in the middle of the planets but of the three worlds, according to the telestic hypotheses.

(The sun is a) fire, the channel of fire, and the dispenser of fire.

Hence Cronus.
The sun assessor beholding the pure pole.

The ethereal course and the vast motion of the moon
And the aerial fluxes.

Oh ether, sun, spirit of the moon, leaders of the air.

And the wide air, and the lunar course, and the pole of the sun.

For the goddess brings forth the great sun and the bright moon.

She collects it, receiving the melody of the ether,
And of the sun, and of the moon, and of whatsoever things are contained in the air.

Unwearied nature rules over the worlds and works,
That heaven drawing downward might run an eternal course,
And that the other periods of the sun, moon, seasons, night, and day, might be accomplished.

Immense nature is exalted about the shoulders of the goddess.

The most celebrated of the Babylonians, together with Ostanes and Zoroaster, very properly call the starry spheres herds; whether because these alone among corporeal magnitudes, are perfectly carried about a centre, or in conformity to the oracles, because they are considered by them as in a certain respect the bonds and collectors of physical reasons, which they likewise call in their sacred discourses herds, and by the insertion of a gamma, angels. Wherefore the stars which preside over each of these herds are considered demons similar to the angels, and are called archangels: and they are seven in number.

Zoroaster calls the congruities of material forms to the reasons of the soul of the world, divine allurements.
[For would-be disciples]

144 Direct not thy mind to the vast measures of the earth;
For the plant of truth is not upon ground.
Nor measure the measures of the sun, collecting rules,
For he is carried by the eternal will of the father, not for your sake.
Dismiss the impetuous course of the moon; for she runs always by the work of necessity.
The progression of the stars was not generated for your sake.\(^1\)
The wide aerial flight of birds is not true,
Nor the dissections of the entrails of victims: they are all mere toys,
The basis of mercenary fraud: flee from these
If you would open the sacred paradise of piety
Where virtue, wisdom, and equity, are assembled.\(^2\)

145 Stoop not down to the darkly-splendid world;
In which continually lies a faithless depth, and Hades
Cloudy, squalid, delighting in images unintelligible,
Precipitous, winding, a blind profundity always rolling,
Always espousing an opaquous, idle, breathless body.\(^3\)

1 [Cf. “. . . even the later Chaldees,* who had gradually fallen into dualism, reducing all things to two primal principles, had no more worshipped Satan or idols than have the Zoroastrians, who are now accused of the same, but that their religion was as highly philosophical as any; their dual and exoteric Theosophy became the heirloom of the Jews, who, in their turn, were forced to share it with the Christians. Parsis are charged to this day with heliolatry, and yet in the Chaldean Oracles, under the ‘Magical and Philosophical Precepts’ of Zoroaster, the following is found:

Direct not thy mind to the vast measures of the earth, . . . etc.”

* The earlier “Chaldees” . . . were the “wise men” of a caste, not of a nation, a community of great adepts [who came] from their “Serpent-holes,” and who had settled in Babylonia ages before [the Hebrews].

2 Z. | Psal. 4.

[Cf. “There is a vast difference between the true worship taught to those who showed themselves worthy, and the state religions. The Magians are accused of all kinds of superstition, but the Chaldean Oracle proceeds:

The wide aerial flight of birds is not true, . . . etc.

Surely it is not those who warn people against ‘mercenary fraud’ who can be accused of it; as said elsewhere:

If they accomplished acts which seem miraculous, who can with fairness presume to deny that it was done merely because they possessed a knowledge of natural philosophy and psychological science to a degree unknown to our schools?”

146 Stoop not down, for a precipice lies below the earth,
   Drawing under a descent of seven steps, beneath which
   Is the throne of dire necessity.

147 Leave not the dross of matter on a precipice,
   For there is a portion for the image in a place ever splendid.

148 Invoke not the self-conspicuous image of nature.

149 Look not upon nature, for her name is fatal.

150 It becomes you not to behold them before your body is initiated,
   Since by always alluring, they seduce the souls of the [un] initiated.

151 Bring her not forth, lest in departing she retain something.

152 Defile not the spirit, nor deepen a superficies.

153 Enlarge not thy destiny.

154 Not hurling, according to the oracle, a transcendent foot towards piety.

155 Never change barbarous names,
   For there are names in every nation given from God,
   Having unspeakable efficacy in the mysteries.

156 Go not out when the lictor passes by.

157 Let fiery hope nourish you in the angelic region.

158 The fire-glowing conception has the first rank,
   For the mortal who approaches the fire shall have light from God,
   For to the persevering mortal, the blessed immortals are swift.

159 The Gods exhort us
   To understand the preceding form of light.

160 It becomes you to hasten to the light and the rays of the Father,
From whence was sent to you a soul endued with much mind.¹

161 Seek paradise.²

162 Learn the Intelligible, for it subsists beyond the mind.³

163 There is a certain Intelligible which it becomes you to understand with the flower of Mind.⁴

164 But the paternal mind receives not her⁵ will Until she has gone out of oblivion, and pronounce the word,
Assuming the memory of the pure paternal symbol.⁶

165 To these he gave the ability of receiving the knowledge of light;
Those that were asleep he made fruitful from his own strength.⁷

166 It is not proper to understand that Intelligible with vehemence,
But with the extended flame of an extended mind measuring all things
Except that Intelligible. But it is requisite to understand this:
For if you incline your mind you will understand it
Not earnestly, but it becomes you to bring with you a pure and inquiring eye,
To extend the void mind of your soul to the Intelligible,⁹
That you may learn the Intelligible,
Because it subsists beyond mind.¹⁰

167 You will not understand it, as when understanding some particular thing.¹¹

168 You, who understand, know the supermundane paternal depth.¹²

169 Things divine are not attainable by mortals who understand body,
But only as many as are lightly armed arrive at the summit.¹³

170 Having put on the complete-armed vigour of resounding light.
With triple strength fortifying the soul and the mind,
He must put into the mind the symbol of variety, and not walk
Dispersedly on the empyreal channels, but collectively.

171 For being furnished with every kind of armour, and armed, he is similar to the goddess.¹

172 Explore the river of the soul, whence, or in what order, Having become a servant to body, you may again rise To the order from which you descended, joining works to sacred reason.²

173 Every way to the unfashioned soul extend the reins of fire.³

174 Let the immortal depth of your soul lead you, But earnestly extend your eyes upwards.⁴

175 Man, being an intelligible mortal, must bridle his soul, That she may not incur terrestrial infelicity but be saved.⁵

176 If you extend the fiery mind to the work of piety, You will preserve the fluxible body.⁶

177 The telestic life, through a divine fire, removes all the stains, together with every foreign and irrational nature, which the spirit of the soul attracted from generation, as we are taught by the oracle to believe.⁷

178 The oracles of the Gods declare, that, through purifying ceremonies, not the soul only, but bodies themselves become worthy of receiving much assistance and health: “for (say they) the mortal vestment of bitter matter will, by this means, be preserved.” And this, the Gods, in an exhortatory manner, announce to the most holy of Theurgists.⁸

179 We should flee, according to the oracle, The multitude of men going in a herd.⁹

180 Who knows himself knows all things in himself.¹⁰

181 The oracles often give victory to our own choice, and not to the order alone of the mundane periods. As, for instance, when they say, “On beholding yourself, fear.” And, again, “Believe yourself to be above body, and you are.” And, still further, when they assert “That our voluntary sorrows germinate in us as the growth of the particular life we lead.”¹¹

182 These things I revolve in the recluse temples of my mind.

183 As the oracle, therefore, says, “God is never so much turned away from man, and never so much sends him new paths, as when he makes ascent to the most divine of speculations, or works, in a confused or disordered manner, and, as it adds, with unhallowed lips, or unwashed feet. For of those who are thus negligent, the progressions are imperfect, the impulses are vain, and the paths are dark.”

184 Not knowing that every god is good, you are fruitlessly vigilant.

185 Theurgists fall not so as to be ranked among the herd that are in subjection to fate.

186 “That the number nine is divine, receiving its completion from three triads, and preserving the summits of theology according to the Chaldaic philosophy, as Porphyry informs us.”

187 In the left sides of Hecate is a fountain of virtue, Which remains entire within, not sending forth its virginity.

188 And the earth bewails them even to their children.

189 The furies are the constrainers of men.

190 Lest being baptized in the furies of the earth, and in the necessities of nature (as some one of the gods says) it should perish.

191 Nature persuades us that there are pure demons, Even the blossoms of evil matter are useful and good.

192 As yet three days ye shall sacrifice, and no longer.

193 In the first place, the priest, who governs the works of fire, Must sprinkle with the cold water of the loud-sounding sea.

194 Energize about the Hecatic Strophalus.

195 When you shall see a terrestrial demon approaching Exclaim, and sacrifice the stone Mnizurin.

    Nor do the stars shine, the light of the moon is hidden,
    The earth stands not still, but all things appear in thunders. ¹

    Or even unfigured fire, whence an antecedent voice,
    Or light rich, glittering, resounding, revolved.

    Shining flashingly through the depths of the whole world
    Hear the voice of fire. ³

¹ It becomes you not to behold them before your body is initiated,
Since, by always alluring, they seduce the souls of the [un]initiated, says another philosopher [Proclus, On the First Alcibiades; see Fragment 150 above.]

2 They objected to it for several good reasons.
1. ‘It is extremely difficult to distinguish a good daemon from a bad one,’ says Iamblichus.
2. If a human soul succeeds in penetrating the density of the earth’s atmosphere — always oppressive to her, often hateful — still she cannot avoid incurring a danger which accrues from this proximity to the material world; ‘departing, she retains something,’ that is to say, contaminating her purity, for which she has to suffer more or less after her departure. Therefore, the true theurgist will avoid causing any more suffering to this pure denizen of the higher sphere than is absolutely required by the interests of humanity. It is only the practitioner of black magic who compels the presence, by the powerful incantations of necromancy, of the tainted souls of such as have lived bad lives, and are ready to aid his selfish designs. Of intercourse with the Augoeides, through the mediumistic powers of subjective mediums, we elsewhere speak.

3 The theurgists employed chemicals and mineral substances to chase away evil spirits. Of the latter, a stone called Μνίζουρι one of the most powerful agents.” — Isis Unveiled, 1 p. 312. — ED. PHIL.
